There's an App for That! Whether it is determining audiometric levels, reporting near misses or inspecting a jobsite, the use of smartphones/tablets is changing the way safety managers perform their jobs. Presented by seasoned “in the trenches” safety professionals, this seminar will review some of the more popular safety apps and websites that better allow construction companies to protect their greatest resource, their people.

About the Instructors

Brad Simon, CHST – Brad Simon has over 12 years of construction experience with over 14 years of safety management within the heavy highway, bridge, site development, infrastructure and renewable energy market segments. He is a board-certified Construction Health and Safety Technician. Brad is currently responsible for 8-10 active projects and development of improved safety and awareness policies and training. Brad is currently the Secretary/Treasurer of the Dig Safely New York's Damage Prevention Council (Capital Region) and formerly Co-Chairman (Highway) of the AGC NYS Safety Committee.

Christopher Fuller, CSP – Chris Fuller has over 16 years of construction experience with the last 12 years dedicated to safety management with the manufacturing, healthcare and education markets. He is a board-certified Safety Professional and is also a Special Government Employee with OSHA's Voluntary Protection Program. Chris is responsible for nearly 20 active construction projects in upstate New York that represent a trade contractor work force in excess of 1,500 workers. Chris actively participates in Dig Safely New York's Damage Prevention Council, the Capital Region Health and Safety Council and the AGC NYS Safety Committee.
