Performing public work for New York State’s various contracting agencies, public authorities and political subdivisions (cities, counties, towns, school districts, etc.) can be a daunting endeavor due to the large number of complicated laws, rules and regulations a contractor or subcontractor must comply with. From the advertising of bids and letting of contracts, to claims against public bodies, there are numerous legal pitfalls that can mean the difference between success and failure on a public project. This 3-hour seminar will provide an overview of what every contractor and subcontractor need to know when performing public work, from the bidding process to project closeout. Areas to be covered include:
